WHERE GRANT STANDS.—There are many persons who have heretofore felt inclined to vote for Grant, notwithstanding that they were opposed to the principles of the Radical party. The reason given by them is, that they believed Grant to be conservative and an opponent of the schemes of the ultra Radicals. Now, the truth is, that no one, not even his most intimate friends, could state with anything like certainty, where Grant stood until his shameful betrayal of the President in the Stanton matter; and this affair proved that he was willing to barter his honor for a Presidential nomination from what seemed to him to be the winning party, and when, in accepting this nomination he curiously approved the platform, he signed himself a Radical, and is thereby under bond, if elected, to carry out the principles of the Radical party. If Grant is a conservative, then he is practicing the grossest fraud and imposition, upon the Radical party, and is unworthy the support of respectable voters; and if he is a Radical, as he says he is, then no man who is opposed to the principles of Radicalism, can consistently vote for him.

PEACE OR WAR?—Southern papers come laden with ominous reports from all quarters of the South concerning the threatening aspect of affairs in that region. At a meeting of the Loyal League, held a short time since at Spring Hill, in Georgia, the negroes, accompanied by their Radical brethren of fairer skin, went in squads, armed with guns, pistols and swords. One of their speakers assured the audience that "they would inherit one-third of the lands in America and that they would have to pass through a bloody war to accomplish it. Christmas is the time set apart for the conflict to commence. The whites and negroes could not live together—separation must take place. Such sentiments were lustily cheered and the negroes seemed eager for the fray. This is one of the effects of Radicalism. Of such are the supporters of Gen. Grant.

WOULD BE DISFRANCHISED!—In his debate with Mr. Douglas, at Charleston, Illinois, Mr. Lincoln made use of the following words: "I will say, then, that I am not nor never have been in favor of bringing about in any way the social and political equality of the white and black races; that I am not and never have been in favor of making voters of negroes, or jurors, or qualifying them to hold office. I say in addition that there is a physical difference between the white and black races, that will forever forbid them from living together upon terms of social and political equality, and that while they do remain together there must be the condition of superior and inferior, and that I am in favor of the superior condition being assigned to the white man."

Were Mr. Lincoln living at the present time and a resident of Arkansas, or Alabama, or any one of the "reconstructed" States, he would be disfranchised. At least he would not be allowed to vote, till he abjured under oath the sentiment of the above extract from one of his speeches. And yet the especial friends of Arkansas, Alabama and other "Southern States" as the ripe fruit of their policy! Who will say that the Republican party is not a progressive party?—Santa Clara Argus.

BLISTER.—The Radicals in this State are carrying on their campaign by systematic misrepresentation and bluster. They stick at no falsehood; and they brag, and blow, and offer to bet fabulous amounts when no one is by who is able to take the bet, their game being one of "bluff." The truth is, the knowing ones have scarcely a hope of carrying the State for Grant.

How WOULD CLAY VOTE?—If Henry Clay now lived he would not support Grant, for he once declared: "If my suffrage is asked for the highest civil officer of my country, the candidate, however illustrious and successful he may be, must present some other title than laurels, however gloriously gathered on the blood-stained battle field."

EVERY man in the South whose words betray the fact that he is yet a rebel at heart is for Seymour and Blair. [Radical Exchange.]

And every man in Congress and out, whose hands are dirty with robbing the people, endorse the Congressional policy of taxing white labor to support negro idleness—of robbing the laboring poor for the benefit of untaxed wealth—of government extravagance and unlimited rascality among government officials, is a supporter of Grant and Colfax. [Detroit Free Press.]

Work! Work!

There is some danger that Democrats, relying upon the victories of 1867, may not see the necessity of making that organized effort which is necessary for the achievement of complete success. Our enemies are in the field, thoroughly armed and equipped, and are making the most desperate exertion to reverse the verdict rendered against them by the people last year. If they are beaten again, now, their organization, as they well know, will be gone forever; hence the desperation with which they fight. And can it be that they who labor in a bad cause shall outwork us who are upholding the dearest cause that ever appealed to the sympathy of Americans, viz: the rights of States and the liberties of the people? Every Democrat should esteem it a glorious privilege to throw himself into the contest with all the ardor of his nature, even though the State was certain for Seymour by twenty thousand majority. There is lacking no incentive to exertion; we see our matchless form of Government well nigh destroyed, while the heartless Jacobins laugh and make merry over the ruin they have made; we hear the cries arising from a down-trodden and oppressed people, and that people our own flesh and blood; we see States, that once rejoiced in the noble attribute of sovereignty, stamped out of existence by the ruthless heel of a revolutionary Congress; we see a race, the lowest in the scale of human beings, exalted to power over a race that occupies the highest position that animated nature has yet attained; and to crown the hideous enormity, we see a mountain of debt and of taxation pressing like a very atlas upon the labor of the country. What man who sees these things, and who loves his country, but does not feel it his sacred, his bounden duty, to rush into the thick of the fight, and never relax an exertion until his banner kisses the breeze of victory? Every one can do something towards this glorious result, and this something nothing should be able to deter him from doing. When victory comes, as come it will, if we work as patriots should work, what a blessed reflection for each one of us to carry through life with this: "I helped to win the good fight; I helped to save my country."

WHAT DEMOCRATS INTEND TO DO.—The Radicals accuse Democrats of having revolutionary intentions. Admitting the charge, they would simply be following the bad example set them by their opponents; for this Radical party was born of revolution, and has flourished and grown fat upon the misery and distress of the country. If it could be revolutionized out of existence, the people would have abundant cause for rejoicing. But the truth is, the Democrats do not propose, in case of success, to inaugurate revolutionary measures. They simply intend to do that which had it been done by the Radicals would long ago have brought peace to the country; and this is, to withdraw the military from the South, and let the States, each for itself and unrestrained by the general government, manage their affairs as they see best. This is just; this is constitutional; and this is the only road to true peace and prosperity. So long as the present regime is kept up in the South, so long will there be violence and trouble in that section of the country; and if it is revolutionary to do away with this condition of things, and start the people once more on the road to prosperity, then can the Democratic party be justly accused of entertaining revolutionary projects.

RADICAL EXTRAVAGANCE.—When Johnson was in Woodland, in speaking of the national debt contracted under Republican rule, and showing up the extravagance and corruptions of that party, proving that the debt had been increased rather than diminished since the close of the war, and that since the disbanding of the rebel army more than one and one-half billions of dollars have been ground out of the people in the shape of taxes and spent, he stated that if the power of such a corrupt party was perpetuated as they were attempting to perpetuate it by force of the bayonet and negro votes, it would take a ball of silver as large as the planet we live on to supply the Radical demand for money. Our Radical friends, who do not like to hear these matters talked of, have been busy with their slates and pencils to prove that Johnson's illustration was extravagant and that the proposition was absurd. Well, gentlemen of the Radical party, don't get so much excited when reminded of your reckless waste of the people's money. The illustration is not a whit more absurd than the preposterous presumption that peace, prosperity and Union will ever be enjoyed while your corrupt party holds the reins of power.

NEW BOOK—LIFE OF SEYMOUR AND BLAIR. The Agent of this work, who is now canvassing Yolo and Solano counties, has presented us with a copy. The book is published in convenient form, neatly printed, securely bound and contains two hundred and seventy five pages of interesting matter. The author, David C. Croly, of "The New York World," in the compilation of the work seems to have had in view no motives prompted by passion or prejudice, but simply a desire to deal honestly by his readers in presenting facts for their consideration. Its style is clear, concise and forcible, commending itself to the candid reader, and treading of political issues in a manner that renders it invaluable to Democrats and Conservatives.

HOW MANY?—How many people are busy in this world gathering together a bundle of thorns to sit upon! [Exchange.]

Count us out.

The Contest.

This is a contest of principles and not of men. Seymour and Grant shriveled into the smallest insignificance by the side of the vast issues involved. It is for the American people to say whether they shall have a federal system of Government, and with it, liberty; or whether they shall have consolidation, and with it despotism, and all the concomitants of class legislation that press the life out of the subject and the vitality out of the country. We see what the Radicals have already done in the way of monopolies and prohibitory tariffs, but these are as nothing compared to what we shall endure, should their party become a permanence. One after another of the rights of the States will be absorbed into the central vortex, until nothing is left, not even the "shadow of a name." The strifes of local contest, which do so much for the political education of the people, and are hence the surest safeguards for the preservation of their liberty, will be gradually done away with for the central authority will manage these matters as it pleases, and treat the people as so many children. We have seen something like an illustration of this in the reconstruction of the rebellious States; and so sure as the sun rises in the east and sets in the west, so surely will this principle be applied to every State of this country, should not the destroying hand of Radicalism be stayed. The local independence of the States, with all their reserved constitutional rights secured to them, is our only safety for the present, and our only hope for the future. This great issue overshadows everything else, and should engage the profoundest attention of the intelligent voter. There can be no disguising the fact, that our form of Government, which has been the palladium of American liberty for four score years, is trembling beneath the assaults of Radicalism; the axe has been laid at the root of the tree; the blows are vigorous, and without the successful intervention of the conservative element of the country, nothing short of revolution can save the liberty bequeathed to us by our fathers.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN FOLSOM.—We learn from residents of Folsom, who came down this morning that about 4 o'clock last evening a fire broke out in a little house occupied by a Chinaman, west of the Tremont Hotel. As there is no water in Folsom that can be used for extinguishing fires, the flames spread with rapidity, defying all efforts of the Hook and Ladder Company and of the citizens to check them, licking up some three or four little houses that were in their way, until they reached the Tremont Hotel, a large and excellent two-story frame building, owned by Wm. Murray, and occupied by Ira G. Saunders. This too was soon devoured; however, the fire passed on to B. G. Quigley's lumber yard, where it destroyed some 25,000 feet of lumber and three small houses belonging to Quigley, and there it died out for want of food to keep it alive. The Tremont Hotel was insured for two thousand dollars, but there was no insurance on any of the other property. [See 28th inst.]

A FRENCH paper mentions that a gentleman, whose cellar had been greatly infested with rats, found that they disappeared very soon after he placed a cask of petroleum in the place.
